

You're Not Listening!

Below are five quotations on the art of listening. But if you're listening when you read them, you will notice that something sounds wrong. The word in bold in each sentence doesn't belong. Replace each word in bold with one from a different sentence to correct the quotes. Then you'll have five sayings on listening to think about and discuss.

1. We talked for four people. Well, I talked for four, and she listened for two.
Change people to _____.
2. The word listen contains the same letters as the word intent.
Change intent to _____.
3. We have two hours and one tongue so that we would listen more and talk less.
Change hours to _____.
4. Most of the successful silent I've known are the ones who do more listening than talking.
Change silent to _____.
5. Most people do not listen with the ears to understand; they listen with the intent to reply.
Change ears to _____.

Sources of the quotations:

1. Jarod Kintz (American writer, born 1982)
2. Alfred Brendel (Austrian pianist and author, born 1931)
3. Diogenes (philosopher of ancient Greece)
4. Bernard M. Baruch (American financier and philanthropist, died 1965)
5. Stephen R. Covey (American educator and author, died 2012)

